

Robert McNamara

As My Wife Learns to Play the Piano,

pentascales from downstairs
climb and descend,

setting out each time
a little nearer, then arriving.

In a breeze, the oak leaves flicker between green and green.

I feel the day grow large.
Somewhere love cannot suffer harm.