

National Security and Intelligence Program

OVERVIEW OF THE PROGRAM:

The National Security and Intelligence Program is a major in the Social Sciences that is designed to provide the necessary background for students to pursue careers in the national security and / or intelligence communities. The program undertakes a multidisciplinary approach and includes courses from several disciplines including Criminal Justice, History, and Political Science, with additional computer lab and fieldwork. Often times, the work of NSI graduates, whether relating to national security, criminal investigative activities or competition analysis in private industry, involves the preparation of assessments based on the collection, correlation, and analysis of intelligence data. However, the NSI curriculum offers a solid foundation for any career.

EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES:

There is a large demand for trained professionals in post 9/11 government organizations at the local, state and national levels. The largest demand at the federal level is in the Departments of State, Defense, Justice, and Homeland Security, as well as the traditional opportunities in the Intelligence Community with entities such as the Central Intelligence and National Security Agencies. Law enforcement agencies at the state and local levels are also seeking graduates with this critical background. There is also a growing demand in private industry as companies are faced with the challenges and opportunities of globalization.

As one of the few institutions in the country to offer a degree in National Security and Intelligence, FSU has given me the opportunity to receive an exceptional education just three hours away from my hometown. Here, you don't feel like a number in an auditorium, and that is because you aren't. Each and every professor you have makes an effort to get to know you. There is a genuine interest in you as a person, and they are there to help with any question you may have. As a student I have studied abroad in Germany, participated in the Model United Nations and Arab League teams, attended international conferences in New York, Virginia, and Washington D.C., and worked as an Intelligence Analyst at the University's student staffed Open Source Intelligence Exchange (OSIX). The most eye-opening aspect of my college experience has been realizing the incredible education a University within my own home state could give me.
