III. RATIONALE FOR THE PROPOSAL.

- A. Quantitative Assessment: Indicate the types of assessment data, i.e., surveys, interviews, capstone courses, projects, licensure exams, nationally-normed tests, locally developed measurements, accreditation reports, etc., that were collected and analyzed to determine that curricular changes were warranted. Quantitative data is preferred.

We need to prepare our students minoring in journalism or pursuing a B.A. in education with journalism as a teaching field for the changing nature of journalism. A review of many journalism programs in both accredited ACEJMC and non-ACEJMC-accredited schools of journalism reveals that media ethics and law are required courses.

Multimedia, participatory journalism, and social media are creating unmatched opportunities in the job market and are taking the place of “mainstream” media/journalism. According to Franklin University, the only university with a major in social media, career opportunities are expanding at a prodigious rate: “The number of social media job postings has increased by more than 600% in the past 7 years, posting 21,000 jobs on Indeed.com in May 2010 as social media rapidly becomes an integral part of our societal fabric.” (<http://www.franklin.edu/degree-programs/college-of-arts-sciences-technology/undergraduate-majors/social-media-design>).

In a table showing social media technologies used in award-winning PR campaigns, Distaso, McCorkindale and Wright (2011) track the rise in various social media:

Social Media Technology	Percentage of campaigns that used the technology
Blogging	73%
Twitter	50%
Video	34%
Facebook	32%
YouTube	21%
Linking In	14%
Wiki	11%
Video Blogging	11%
Podcasting	11%
Flicker	5%
MySpace	0%

In West Virginia, West Virginia University has a certificate program in social media, but that program does not address participatory journalism to any extent. Marshall University has a digital media major. These are the only public institutions training journalism majors and minors in social media.

Additionally, issues related to libel, copyright, etc., are clearly unfamiliar to journalism students as they continually have difficulties recognizing these problems in print and online.

- B. Qualitative Assessment: Based upon the assessment data above, indicate why a curricular change is justified. Indicate the expected results of the change. Be sure to include an estimate of the increased cost, or reduction in cost of implementation. FOR EXAMPLE: Will new faculty, facilities, equipment, or library materials be required?

The "Information Age" has created new challenges for journalism. Concepts such as "citizen" or "participatory journalism" are now commonplace in mass communication. With strong writing skills, journalism minors and English majors will make significant contributions to the developments in journalism, including social media, independent citizen news, and blogs (among other cyber-outlets). These abilities provide unmatched opportunities in the job market, which are taking the place of "mainstream" media/journalism. Secondary education teachers with a concentration in journalism will need to be prepared to teach these new media as these media become more prevalent in the school.

After a period of having no full-time advisor/coordinator, Fairmont State University's journalism program is redeveloping. Interest in the minor and in the concentration are growing, but our limited course offerings do not adequately prepare students for the field.

- IV. Should this proposal affect any course or program in another school, a memo must be sent to the Dean of each school impacted and a copy of the memo(s) must be included with this proposal. In addition, the Deans of the affected schools must sign below to indicate their notification of this proposal.

By signing here, you are indicating your college's/school's notification of this proposal.
